Katie Pritchard
technical creative

Meet Katie Pritchard
Technical Creative

My name is Katie Pritchard and I combine creative solutions with technical expertise to solve complex problems. I built a foundation of diversity in my undergraduate career, graduating from Bucknell University in 2013 with a dual degree in Computer Science and East Asian Studies (Japanese).

With over 7 years of industry experience as a full-stack software engineer, I have designed, built, and maintained custom modules for a web application that serves over 20,000 users for use across the majority of Department of Defense (DoD) components.

My diversity of interests and creativity is what sets me apart. In addition to a technical foundation, I have a love for graphic design and branding, and am currently pursuing a certificate of Graphic Design and George Mason University. I have experience as a writing tutor and volunteer as part of the Media Team with the DC Shiba Inu Rescue. I love to cook and travel and document my experiences on my blog tipsychocochip.com.

If you are looking for a creative who also has the technical skills to help implement the solution, please reach out to see what I can do for you.
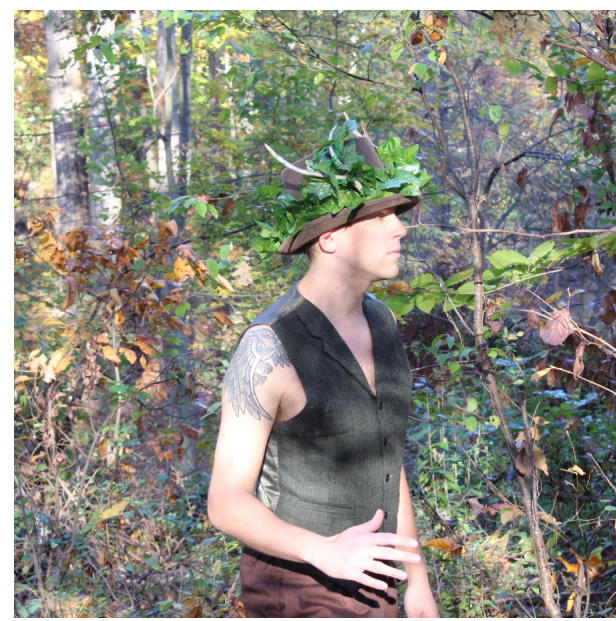

Typography as expression. Explore the aesthetics of typography together with visual representation of the meaning of the word.
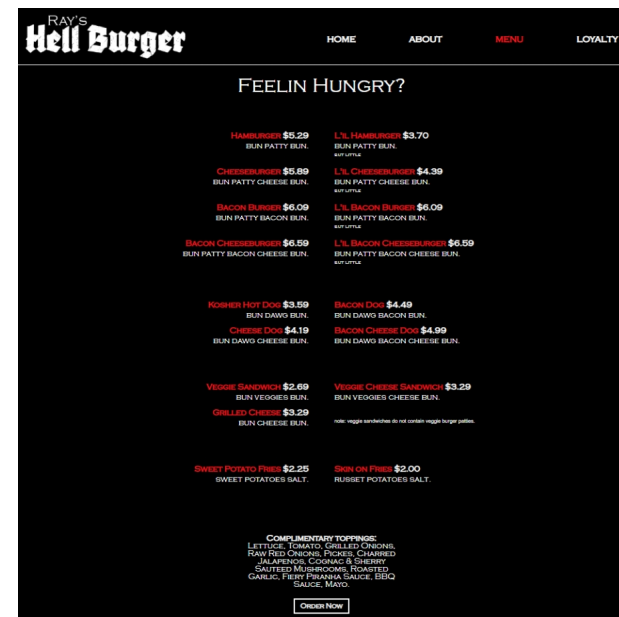

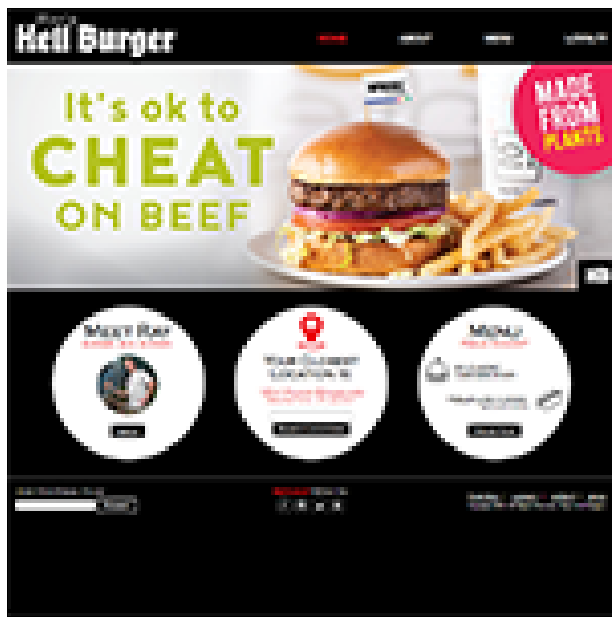

more ...

Photography

Defining persona. In the modern world, how do our personas define us? Exploring the impact of nature and on our personal selves and what lives inside us all.

more ...

Web Design

Ray's Hell Burger. Design, develop, and publish a new home menu web pages for a burger restaurant.

more ...

Interested?

If you are looking for a creative who also has the technical skills to help implement the solution, please reach out to see what I can do for you.

name >

email >

message >

submit >